International Nuclear Law Essentials

(INLE) is a five-day programme offered by the OECD Nuclear Energy Agency (NEA). It is designed to provide participants with a comprehensive understanding of the various interrelated legal issues relating to the safe, efficient and secure use of nuclear energy.

This intensive programme in international nuclear law accommodates the needs and interests of lawyers working in either the public or the private sector but will also be of interest to scientists, engineers, policymakers, managers and other professionals working in the nuclear field.

The International Nuclear Law Essentials programme builds on the foundation of the annual International School of Nuclear Law that the NEA co-sponsors with the University of Montpellier in France.

Lecturers

Comprehensive lectures are delivered by renowned specialists in nuclear law from international organisations, governments and private industry.

Practical information

Admission

The INLE is open to applicants who have at least one year of relevant professional experience and a basic understanding of law as it relates to nuclear energy.

Application forms are available on the NEA website (www.oecd-nea.org/law/inle).

Programme

The following subjects are usually covered during the five-day programme:

- Introduction to nuclear law;
- Nuclear safety;
- International nuclear emergency management;
- Nuclear regulatory regimes;
- International radiological protection standards;
- International trade in nuclear materials and equipment;
- Liability, compensation and insurance for nuclear damage;
- Management of spent fuel and radioactive waste;
- Environmental protection;
- Non-proliferation of nuclear weapons and international safeguards for nuclear materials;
- Nuclear security: physical protection, illicit trafficking and terrorism;
- Transport of nuclear materials and fuel.

The NEA provides a certificate of participation to those who attend the course.

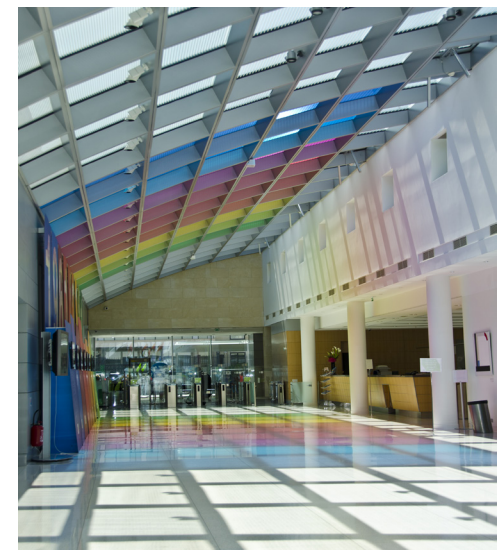

Language

All course instruction and discussions take place in English; all course materials are provided in English. Simultaneous interpretation is not available during the course.
